(Note 1) Certain "exotic" elements (111-118) are known to exist "in the wild". While debate continues on whether these complex compounds would be more correctly termed Affiliate Elements, no official symbols have yet been assigned. They are included here pending ongoing exploration.

(Note 2) While the placement of Harmonic Elements in the Periodic Table has long been a closely guarded secret, extensive research has shown that, where it is not otherwise obvious, the location may be related to the Element's place of origin, or to the year the Element was officially recognized. Other placements remain shrouded in harmonic lore. Since many elements have not yet been discovered, ongoing research and official recognition will likely continue to dominate the annual conventions.
